END OF AUCTION. THANKS TO ALL CONCERNED.

IMPORTANT MESSAGE

I am sitting at my desk writing this just three days before the October Auction. At this precise moment I have a grand total of just 22 bidders bidding on just 120 lots. Come 8.30pm on Auction Day I usually have in excess of 80 bidders bidding on 400+ lots. That is not going to happen this time.

200+ potential bidders have had the chance to look at the Catalogue either in paper form or on the website. So what's gone wrong?

The top guess is that there's not much in the auction that people want & a few people have mentioned that to me already. Without pointing a finger at anyone in particular we do seem to have slipped back to the old days when people were sending me stuff they didn't want, for me to try to sell to other people who didn't want it either. I'm not talking necessarily about lesser duplicates from a collection, there is usually a market for such things, but more about accumulations of things from private collectors & dealers that they can't get rid of & that would probably be more suitable for a boot sale. I used to think that my initials LR stood for Last Resort.

Anyway, something needs to change because I'm not trying to run a business as a hobby or as a loss maker. The November auction reflects that to a certain extent with 100 less lots than usual, due to me sending stuff back to where it came from because it was worth nothing, not even as a job lot. I can usually tell when people know they are sending worthless items when they say at the bottom of their lists, 'Don't bother sending any unsold lots back, just throw them away or take them to a charity shop'. Or when they say, 'Thanks for returning such & such, I'll try to sell them at my local car boot sale'.

I don't think it's the commissions putting people off bidding because they are still some of the lowest in the country. So please be careful with what you send & any ideas you may have on the situation I would be pleased to hear.

But now more on commissions. You may wonder why I am about to write this when we seem to be in a bit of a slump but with staff to pay & costs increasing, I cannot afford to be running at a loss.

Back in the day when I took this business on, commissions each way were 4% & bidding steps were 50p. (I think some people think they still are!). Let me try to explain why they are going to rise again on Jan 1st next year.

As you all probably know, because my turnover is more than the threshold, I am registered for VAT. That includes p & p even though stamps are not subject to VAT.

Up until now I have never worried too much about VAT on commissions, although of course, I must pay it.

For example, with 10% commission on a sale of £100, I receive just £8.

So, from the date above I am increasing commissions as follows:

Buyer's Commission will increase from 10 to 13% & this will include VAT so if you are VAT registered you can claim that back of course.

So, with buyers' commission at 13%: on a sale of £100, VAT is 2.60% & the nett commission to me is worth £10.40

Sellers' Commission will increase from 13.5% to 15% & this once again will include VAT

So, with sellers' commission at 15%: on a sale of £100, VAT is 3.00% & the nett commission to me is worth £12.
